This graduate seminar in history, HIST 890.002, will be focused on colonialism and its legacies in African history. We will read and discuss approximately one historical monograph per week, on topics such as colonial impositions, social and religious change, gender, and politics across different parts of sub-Saharan Africa. One week will be devoted to historical novels from Africa. For more information or a draft syllabus, please contact Lisa Lindsay at lalindsa@email.unc.edu.
