“Tending the Enemy’s Flock: German Pastors and POWs in Britain, 1940 – 1955”

My project argues that German pastors, through their work with German POWs, created a space for themselves to take part in international conversations about denazification, humanization, and the reintegration of the postwar world. Both British authorities and German pastors recognized that these POWs created an opportunity for them to influence part of the population that would rebuild Germany, and German pastors recognized an opportunity to attempt to transform the image of Germany conveyed to Britain and the world.
