

Tyra Pearson

Adviser: John Sweet

“‘Unnatural Mother’: Race, Gender, and Infanticide in the Nineteenth Century”

This thesis examines nineteenth century infanticide cases in North Carolina. It explains why most women were acquitted for this crime, despite sufficient evidence to find them guilty, and argues that conceptions of gender, race, and condition of servitude shaped nineteenth century law.